

A coastal barrier system, with revetments covered with sand and natural grass along the coast and moveable flood gates protecting Bolivar Roads and San Luis Pass, doesn't allow the ocean surge into the bay which in turn prevents massive internal storm surges that damage property, sensitive ecosystems, and the loss of human life.

